

Post-school destinations 2011

Victoria

This data does not include international students.

The source of this post-school destination data is On Track survey data, collected from school leavers six months after they have left school. Data from most Victorian secondary schools have been included. The remaining schools have not been included because the numbers of completing students, or the numbers of students responding to the post-school destination survey, were insufficient to provide reliable data.

Victorian students who gained but deferred taking up a bachelor place are not included in this data. Transition rates to university and employment for Victorian schools should be interpreted in this context.

Victorian students may enrol in a bachelor degree at both a university and a TAFE.

Multi-campus school data have been rolled.

Queensland

The source of Queensland post-school destination data is the annual Next Step survey, collected approximately six months after students who completed Year 12 left school. All students who were awarded a Senior Statement from the Queensland Studies Authority, including international students, were included in the survey. Please note that:

- respondents who were offered a university placement but deferred have been reported according to their engagement at the time of the survey;
- some students who completed Year 12 were able to undertake Bachelor degree programs at TAFE;
- respondents undertaking an Apprenticeship or Traineeship are categorised into TAFE/Vocational study;
- due to confidentiality reasons schools with fewer than five respondents are not reported; and
- schools with fewer than 20 responses are provided as numbers and, therefore, not able to be presented on My School due to reporting of percentages only.

Western Australia

The source of post school destination data is the WA School Leaver Survey 2012. Because it is survey data it may differ from school specific exit data. For statistical reliability, the data set includes only those schools with:

- more than ten (10) Year 12 students responding to the survey; and
- responding students representing more than 50% of the Year 12 student population.

Australian Capital Territory (ACT)

- The post school destination calculations are based on students who completed an ACT Year 12 Certificate in 2011 and responded to the School Leaver Survey conducted in May/June 2012. The survey excluded graduates who were full fee paying students whose usual residence was overseas. Students who were studying are classified as either studying at university or TAFE/Vocational. The proportion of students classified as employed excludes students who were also studying. Students who were offered a university placement but deferred have been reported according to their engagement at the time of the survey.
